

RUSSIAN CAPITAL MAY BE REMOVED TO MOSCOW

Flanking Movement of General Von Mackensen Grows Menacing

(By Associated Press.)
LONDON, Aug. 20.--Petrograd is considering the need of moving the capital to Moscow, the ancient seat of government, to evade the German invasion. The flanking movement of General Von Mackensen is more menacing hourly. It is considered probable that Czar Nicholas will abandon his efforts to form a new line at Brest Litovsk as a pivot. Riga is again the center of a land and sea attack, the superiority of the German squadron compelling the Russian warships to draw closer.
